

New lawsuit over UBH's guidelines could yield windfall for providers

Gary Enos

First published: 20 September 2019

Abstract

Following a court ruling earlier this year against United Behavioral Health's (UBH's) former level-of-care and coverage determination guidelines (see ADAW, Aug. 5), the managed behavioral health insurance giant now faces an action that is potentially much more far-reaching — and this time, directly beneficial to substance use and mental health treatment providers.

Read the full article at: <https://onlinelibrary.wiley.com/doi/abs/10.1002/adaw.32486>